The Pilgrims

The Pilgrims were a group of English Puritans who were seeking to reform the Church of England. They believed that the Church of England was too corrupt and that it had strayed from the true teachings of the Bible. The Pilgrims wanted to establish a new church in America where they could worship freely.

The Pilgrims were not the first group of people to come to America. The Spanish had already established colonies in Central and South America, and the French had established colonies in Canada. However, the Pilgrims were the first English people to establish a permanent colony in North America.

The Mayflower's Voyage

The Mayflower set sail from Plymouth, England, on September 6, 1620. The ship was carrying 102 passengers and a crew of 30. The voyage was a long and difficult one. The ship was battered by storms, and the passengers and crew were often seasick. Several people died during the voyage, including one of the Pilgrims' leaders, William Bradford.

On November 9, 1620, the Mayflower finally arrived in America. The Pilgrims landed at Cape Cod, which is now part of Massachusetts. They spent the winter at Cape Cod, and in the spring they moved to Plymouth, where they established their colony.

The Plymouth Colony

The Plymouth Colony was the first permanent English colony in North America. The Pilgrims faced many challenges in the early years of the colony. They had to build houses, clear land for farming, and defend themselves against attacks from Native Americans. However, the Pilgrims persevered, and the colony eventually prospered.

The Plymouth Colony played an important role in the development of the United States. The colony was a model for other English colonies that were established in North America. The Pilgrims also helped to establish the tradition of religious freedom in the United States.
