The hotel is known for its elegant architecture, its luxurious amenities, and its convenient location. The Oakland Astoria is a member of Historic Hotels of America, a prestigious organization that recognizes hotels that have played a significant role in American history.

History

The Oakland Astoria was built in 1917 by the Astoria Hotel Company. The hotel was designed by architect William B. Faville, who also designed the Mark Hopkins Hotel in San Francisco. The Oakland Astoria was built in the Beaux-Arts style, which is characterized by its use of classical elements, such as columns, pediments, and arches.

The hotel opened its doors on January 1, 1918. The hotel was an immediate success, and it quickly became a popular destination for both business and leisure travelers. The Oakland Astoria was also a popular venue for social events, such as weddings, banquets, and parties.

During World War II, the Oakland Astoria was used as a military hospital. The hotel was returned to civilian use after the war, and it continued to operate as a hotel until 1984. In 1984, the hotel was purchased by the City of Oakland. The city renovated the hotel and reopened it in 1986.

Architecture

The Oakland Astoria is a beautiful example of Beaux-Arts architecture. The hotel's exterior is made of white terra cotta and features a variety of classical elements, such as columns, pediments, and arches. The hotel's interior is equally impressive, with its grand lobby, its marble floors, and its crystal chandeliers.

The Oakland Astoria is a designated city landmark. The hotel is also listed on the National Register of Historic Places.
