Traits Process Workshop and Literature Downloads | Pearson Professional

The Traits Process Workshop is a comprehensive professional development program designed to help educators implement the Traits of Writing approach in their classrooms. The workshop is based on the work of Donald Graves, Lucy Calkins, and Nancie Atwell, three of the leading authorities on writing instruction. The workshop provides participants with the knowledge and skills they need to teach students how to write effectively in all genres.

What is the Traits Process?

The Traits Process is a holistic approach to writing instruction that focuses on the six essential traits of writing: ideas and content, organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency, and conventions.

- Ideas and Content: The ideas and content of a piece of writing are the heart of the writing. Students need to be able to generate ideas, organize their thoughts, and develop their ideas into a coherent and cohesive piece of writing.

- Organization: The organization of a piece of writing refers to the way that the ideas are arranged and presented. Students need to be able to use a variety of organizational patterns, such as chronological order, compare and contrast, and cause and effect, to create a piece of writing that is easy to read and understand.

- Voice: The voice of a piece of writing is the writer's unique perspective on the topic. Students need to be able to find their own voice and use it to express their ideas and feelings in a way that is engaging and authentic.

- Word Choice: The word choice in a piece of writing refers to the words that the writer uses to convey his or her ideas. Students need to be able to choose words that are precise, vivid, and appropriate for their audience and purpose.

- Sentence Fluency: The sentence fluency of a piece of writing refers to the way that the sentences flow together. Students need to be able to write sentences that are clear, concise, and varied in length and structure.

- Conventions: The conventions of writing refer to the grammar, usage, and mechanics of writing. Students need to be able to use the conventions of writing correctly in order to produce a piece of writing that is error-free and easy to understand.
