I worked for Donald Trump for 18 years, from 1997 to 2015. I started as a low-level employee and worked my way up to become one of his top executives. During that time, I had the opportunity to observe him up close and personal, and I learned a great deal about his personality and leadership style.

Trump is a complex and contradictory figure. He is brilliant and charismatic, but he is also thin-skinned and impulsive. He is a master of self-promotion, but he is also deeply insecure. He is a ruthless businessman, but he is also capable of great generosity.

One of the most striking things about Trump is his confidence. He believes in himself implicitly, and he is not afraid to take risks. He is also a master of persuasion, and he can talk anyone into anything. He is a born salesman, and he can sell you anything, even if you don't want it.

Trump is also a very demanding boss. He expects his employees to work long hours and to always be available. He is not afraid to fire people, and he does not tolerate failure. He is a perfectionist, and he expects his employees to be the same. He is also a very competitive person, and he always wants to be the best. He is not afraid to go after his rivals, and he will do whatever it takes to win.

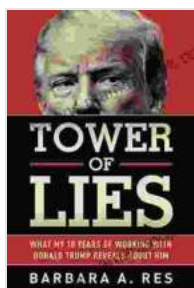

Trump is a very controversial figure. Some people love him, and some people hate him. There is no doubt that he is a polarizing figure, but there is also no doubt that he is a fascinating one. He is a unique individual, and he has had a profound impact on American politics and culture. Whether you love him or hate him, there is no denying that he is a force to be reckoned with.

Here are some specific examples of Trump's personality and leadership style:

- He is a master of self-promotion. He knows how to get his name in the headlines, and he is always looking for ways to promote himself and his businesses.
- He is a very demanding boss. He expects his employees to work long hours and to always be available. He is not afraid to fire people, and he does not tolerate failure.

- He is a perfectionist. He expects his employees to be the same. He is always looking for ways to improve his businesses, and he is not afraid to make changes.
- He is a very competitive person. He always wants to be the best. He is not afraid to go after his rivals, and he will do whatever it takes to win.
- He is a very impulsive person. He often makes decisions without thinking them through. He is also known for changing his mind frequently.
- He is a very thin-skinned person. He is easily offended, and he does not like to be criticized. He often lashes out at his critics, and he is known for holding grudges.

These are just a few of the things that I learned about Donald Trump during my 18 years of working with him. He is a complex and contradictory figure, but there is no doubt that he is a fascinating one. He is a unique individual, and he has had a profound impact on American politics and culture. Whether you love him or hate him, there is no denying that he is a force to be reckoned with.
